the property of Adolph Vald.

The complainant stated that for some time nast he had been expecting a registered letter from Gormany, and a few days since he received information which led him to go to the prisoner and ask to see a letter the latter had received The prisoner refused to show it to him, but after had been sounding it before he came up and some conversation he said he would go to the French Consul with complainant and show it there. The complainant agreed to this, and the prisoner promised to call at his house for him at three o'clock that afternoon, and go with him to the French Consulate. Complainant waited for him, but he never came, and in the evening he went in search of the prisoner at the Welcome Tavorn, where he was in the habit of playing a a promise of calling the next day, but he never keel, and after that she would not pay off any concerting. THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER "BRECONSHIRE"

MARINE COURT OF INQUIEY. The Marine Court of Inquiry into the circumstunces attending the loss of the above steamer on the White Rocksnear Swatow was resumed at the Harbour Office yesterday morning, when the | hour, and when it was re-opened the President following further evidence was taken. Robert Scobey said he was second mate of the

at sea to assist the captain in navigating the ship. On the voyage from Nagasaki they got sights on the 14th March, and again on the 15th, but on the 16th they were unable to take sights on account of the fog. On that day the ship was laid off on the chart, but he did not remember whether it was by dead reckoning or how. H could remember that there was no land sighted, but he did not remember anything more about what was done on the 16th, as it was some time ago now, He did not remember whether the sounding made on that day agreed with the dead reckening. The chief officer thought he saw land on the starboard beam about noon on the 16th, and he called witness's attention to it. Witness also thought he saw it too, but he was not sure. Afterwards he thought it could not have been land by the subsequent soundings, which he heard were too deep to be near land. On the 17th they got sights at about 8.30; he and the captain took the sights together, and they both agreed. He did not then assist the captain to mark the position off on the chart, but the capwater were found. He then assisted the captain to mark off their position on the chart. As the soundings did not agree with their reckoning they concluded that they were not in the position they had imagined. The ship was steering W. by S. at the time; he had nothing to do with setting that course. Before the vessel struck the rocks ahead were reported from the bridge by the fourth officer. Witness was in the chart room at the time, and he ran out at once and put the helm hard a-starboard. When he came out he saw rocks reaching from the starboard beam to right shead. The engines were stopped. The captain called for someone to go forward to the forecastle, and witness went, and when he got there the vessel struck. The vessel first slightly touched something with her keel, and passed over it, and then she immediately ran on the rocks. It was near Turnsbout that he thought he saw land on the 16th; he thought he just saw the loom of the land. The President—Why were you in the chart room with the captain consulting about the chart just, before the ship struck? Were you in doubt about your position

Witness-No, I cannot say that we were; I do not know what I was in the chart room for then. I believe the captain was in the chart room when I went in. I do not remember that anything was said between us; we were not consulting. The captain had consulted with me before about our position on the chart. minutes past nine, before the ship struck, and about half-past nine the fourth mate again relieved him. Witness could not remember whether the captain called him into the chart room. This was witness's first voyage in a Falconer & Co., added to a Sweepstakes of $5 steamer. Witness was on duty during the middle American files received yesterday:each, for ponies that have never won a race, watches on the 15th and 16th, and he always catch weights over 11st. When the soundings were taken the ship was stopped dead. and witnesss showed what kind of bottom the lurging the Government to make certain amendsoundings gave. Captain Pope told witness that the position by observation gave a great deal less water than the soundings. Witness did not remember Captain Pope speaking to him in the chart room before the ship struck. Witness was confident that the soundings were correctly taken. When the vessel was near the Lammacks he heard no gun nor any signal; they passed from three to four miles distant from them, and witness thought they ought to have heard the fog gun. At the time the observations were taken it was thick, and witness should say they could see seven or eight miles to the southward, and about three to the northward. At about half-past nine that morning the ship struck; he could see about three miles round Between nine and half-past the captain ordered a man to go on the lookout on the forecastle in case the weather became thicker. At the time The South Australian Advertiser states that he left the bridge-about 9.30-he considered the The oppression of Chinese subjects by their Governor-General of India, received a number tain-Superintendent of Police on the application | Lieutenant Immergosende, of the German Navy, ship was being navigated with perfect safety;

mate's certificate, No. 025271. On the morning of the 17th witness went on the bridge at g'clock, and relieved the chief officer. He left for breakfast at nine, being relieved by the second officer, whom he again relieved about half past nine. When he left the dock the weather was clear, and they were steering S. W. by W. The ship was going at full speed until nine o'clock, when a cast of the lead was taken, the common deep sea lead being used. When le went on deck again from breakfast it was misty, thicker than when he went down. The ship was still going at full speed, and witness could see about three or four miles ahead and on the port side, about a mile on the starboard said. The whistle was constantly sounded, witness pulling it by the cantain's orders. The second offic r witness had also heard it before eight o'clock. About ten minutes after he came on deck witness saw rock ahead and on the starboard bow. He ordered the helm hard a-starboard, called for the captain, who was in the chart room, and stopped the engines and put them full speed asteru. When the captain came on the bridge he at once repeated the orders witness had just given. The vessel's head paid off about two more but came round starboard against her helm. She ran on for about a quarter of a mile, and then went upon the rocks.

By the Court—Witness did not see the course altered on the morning of the 17th. By Captain Pope-Witness was positive from memory that the course was W. S. W. Captain Pope had left the bridge about four minutes when upon it. The letter was then delivered to the the ship struck, and as he left he gave orders to witness to stop the ship if the whether came on for the letter inquiries had been made at a place thicker. It did not come on thicker after the captain left the bridge/ Witness saw the rocks just before the lookout sang out. The captain was on deck during the whole of this watch, and of witness's previous watches. Witness was put and Antonio Albani, the Treasurer, gave on the watch with the captain because the third mate was ill.

Edwin Charles Phillips said he was chief engineer of the Breconskire, holding a first class and at 9.17 full speed shead; at 9.49 they received the order to stop, and immediately after full speed astern. At 9.55 the order was given to stop, and the vessel was ashore. Witness was by the engine room door when the telegraph rung at 9.49, and he immediately went down. Thore were two engineers in the engine room at the time. He remained below until the vessel

Captain Pope was asked whether be desired to call any further evidence, and he said he desired no one to be called unless it was the steersman to clear un the point as to what course he was steer ing on the morning of the 17th.

The President said they were quite satisfied as to that, and there could be no need to call the steersman upon that point. Captain Pope said there was no one else he desired to call.

The Court was then cleared, and when it wife re-opened an hour afterwards the President said they had opened the court for the purpose of ascertaining from the master of the ship whether he had anything further to say. The court was of opinion that they had sufficient evidence bafore them then, and they had no desire for any more, but if Captain Pope had anything further to put before them they should be happy to hear

The court was again cleared for over half an read the following: -

We find that the British steamer Broconshire, official number 79674; William Edwin Pope, master, who holds an extra master's certificate, No. 07090, left Nagasaki on the 13th March last on a voyage to London via Hongkong.

That at the time of leaving the ship was fully manned and found for the voyage. That at noon on the 15th March the position of the ship was Lat. 28.17 N., and long. 122.57 E. and that soon after this the weather became thick and foggy, and continued so until the 17th, when the vessel struck on the White Rocks, where she became a total

We find that the master navigated the ship in a careful and creditable manner until the morning of the 17th, though we are of opinion that he did not show sufficient confidence in his reckoning, preferring to be guided more by the soundings, which are shown to be very ir-

That on the 17th, at about 7 a.m., a course was set W. by S. which we are of opinion was not a safe and proper course under the circumstances, and that the master afterwards obtained an observation, the result of which should have shown him his errors; and the reasons given by him for adopting this course, we are of opinion, do not justify him in so doing, and we consider that this was the direct cause of the loss of the ship.

We are opinion that the measures adopted after the casualty, and the conduct of the master under the circumstances are creditable to him. It appears evident to the court that the Breconshire must have passed within about two miles of the Lammocks in weather in which it was reasonable to expect that the fog signals there would have been made use of, and that at this time the Breconshire was making constant use of her steam whistle.

The court is of opinion that blams must be attributed to the master for setting an unsafe course on the morning of the 17th, and his certificate is therefore suspended for three months from this date. Given under our hands this 2nd day of April,

These resident Chinamen obtain their certificates and forward them to their friends in China. who, on British soil, simply hand the certificates to the customs officers and are allowed to land without paying the regular tax. In the Governor-General's message reference was made to a proposed amendment to the Chinese bill, and it will probably be in the direction of taking away these certificates, which appears to be the only means by which the existing evil can be re-

BELFAST, 22nd February. Large bodies of Orangemen, wearing regalia, music, met Lord Randolph Churchill at the deto Ulster Hall, where addresses were presented one. to him. Replying, he said he wished those contemplating the dissolution of the union were present. They would then perceive that Belfast would never submit to disunion. The town is excited and extensive police precautions have

In the numerous processions which paraded the streets were many women, who all displayed orange cotour. So dense was the crowd that filled the principal thoroughfares that traffic was detained for several hours. No sooner had Lord Randoloh seated himself in the carriage that was waiting for him than the crowd made a rush for the carriage, unhitched the horses and proceeded to drag the vehicle from the station to the hotel. Theenthusiasm displayed along the line of march was prodicious.

POST-OFFICE NOTICES

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or lelayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addressee heed do is to note on the cover. This should be asted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.
